

MASTER IN TRANSLATION

Concentrations:

- Conference Translation
- Banking and Business Translation
- Media Translation
- Translation Studies

Main Language of Instruction:

French English Arabic

Campus Where the Program Is Offered: CSH

OBJECTIVES

The Master in Translation at the School of Translators and Interpreters of Beirut (ETIB) aims to train highly skilled translators equipped with linguistic mastery, technological expertise, and strong professional ethics.

Designed to meet the current demands of the global translation market, this program empowers students with the essential competencies to excel across various sectors of the translation industry. Offered in four concentrations

- Conference Translation, Media Translation, Banking and Business Translation, and Translation Studies - it allows students to refine their expertise while building a robust foundation of key skills, including:

- Linguistic and Cultural Mastery: Demonstrating an in-depth understanding of both source and target languages, while integrating the socio-cultural nuances specific to each communication context.
- Strategic Translation Approach: Adopting translation methods tailored to the thematic and stylistic demands of each text, while critically evaluating the contributions and limitations of machine translation within the workflow.
- Optimized Use of Technology: Efficiently leveraging computer-assisted translation (CAT) tools for project management, localization, revision, and post-editing, thereby enhancing productivity and consistency.
- Collaborative Project Management: Planning and organizing workflow within a team setting, fostering autonomy, time management, resilience under pressure, and strict adherence to deadlines.
- Critical Thinking and Creativity in the Age of AI: Analyzing data generated by artificial intelligence technologies with discernment, while applying creative solutions to address translation challenges.
- Ethical and Entrepreneurial Project Management: Leading translation projects with a commitment to ethical standards and quality assurance, meticulously following the project brief and meeting client expectations.

PROGRAM LEARNING OUTCOMES (COMPETENCIES)

Common Competencies

- Mediate in specific intracultural and intercultural contexts
- Collaborate ethically and efficiently with the different practitioners in the translation industry
- Adapt theory to translation practice
- Make effective use of digital tools and applications to streamline the translation process and efficiently manage workflows

Specific competency to the Conference Translation Concentration

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

- Perfect command of Arabic (A language), French (B or C Language), and English (B or C language)
- Submission of:
 - Bachelor in Translation, Languages or Literature. Any other Bachelor should be examined and approved by the USJ Equivalence Committee.
 - Equivalence of the Bachelor's degree from the Ministry of Education and Higher Education in case the degree is not awarded by the Lebanese University.

In all cases:

- The ETIB administration and the USJ Equivalence Committee review candidates' applications; supplementary courses may be deemed necessary.
- Admission is contingent on successfully passing the Master's entrance examination.

COURSES/CREDITS GRANTED BY EQUIVALENCE

Any student who has successfully completed all the courses in one of the four concentrations of the Master in Translation will be granted, by equivalence, the 60 credits of common courses required for all concentrations, if they wish to enroll in another concentration within the program.

The transfer from one program to another within ETIB or from another university requires approval from the USJ Equivalence Committee. If approved, the number of credits obtained through equivalence should not surpass 50% of the credits in the study program.

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Common Courses

103GDBLM2	Blog Management	2 Cr.
This course integrates both technical expertise and a comprehensive understanding of web interfaces, particularly focusing on blogs. The primary objective is to equip students with the skills to articulate the dynamics of informational interactions within web interfaces using precise terminology. Subsequently, students will practically apply these principles by creating a blog through the WordPress platform as well as other platforms. Through this dual approach, students will gain proficiency not only in the theoretical aspects of web interface behavior but also in the hands-on implementation of their knowledge in the development and management of a blog.

103DESPM4	Deontology, Entrepreneurship and Project Management Simulation	4 Cr.
This course provides a comprehensive examination of the ethical considerations inherent in the field of translation, placing particular emphasis on cultivating entrepreneurial skills and project realization. Students will delve into the foundational principles of professional translation ethics, concentrating on ethical challenges specific to multicultural settings and diverse specialized domains. They will gain a critical understanding of the prevalent ethical dilemmas within the translation profession and explore responsible strategies for addressing them. Moreover, the course addresses crucial entrepreneurial competencies for translators, encompassing project management, adept client communication, pricing translation services, and effective self-promotion within the professional sphere. Students will also acquaint themselves with project simulation tools and methodologies, engaging in scenarios mirroring real-life situations encountered by professional translators and making effective use of search engines, corpus-based tools, text analysis tools, computer-assisted translation (CAT) and quality assurance (QA) tools where appropriate. These practical exercises aim to foster the development of both practical and strategic skills, equipping students to navigate the intricate challenges of the translation profession while upholding the utmost ethical standards.

103MDCOM1	Digital Marketing and Communication	2 Cr.
This course is designed to equip translation students with the necessary knowledge and skills to leverage digital marketing and communication strategies in the translation industry. Students learn about various digital marketing tools and techniques and understand how they can be applied to promote their translation services, attract clients, and establish a professional online presence. The course covers topics such as website optimization, content marketing, social media management, email marketing, search engine optimization (SEO), and online advertising.

103HISTM3	History of Translation	2 Cr.
This course is designed to enhance students' proficiency in analyzing the various phases of translation history. Through the adoption of a critical stance towards translation studies, students will be prompted to closely scrutinize the evolution of approaches, theories, and methodologies that have left an indelible mark on the history of translation. Delving into the historical and cultural contexts that have shaped the discipline will empower them to fully comprehend the impact of past trends on contemporary translation practices. Going beyond conventional historical analysis, this course invites students to engage in critical reflection on recent developments within translation studies. They will be urged to interact with innovative concepts and broaden their comprehension of contemporary translation issues. Consequently, students will not only be adept at navigating the intricate history of translation studies but will also be poised to actively contribute to its evolution by assimilating new perspectives and approaches into their analytical thinking.
103SREPM4
Internship Report
		8 Cr.
The aim of the internship is to provide students in translation with an enriching professional experience within an institution engaged in communication, languages, and/or translation. The primary objective is to empower students to apply the theoretical knowledge acquired throughout their university studies in a real-life professional context. The internship report is thus a personal document. Students document the various stages of the internship and then analyze them to take an overall look at their academic training based on professional practice.
103LEAEM1	Literary Field English-Arabic-English	2 Cr.
This advanced-level course in literary translation is tailored for Master's students seeking a nuanced exploration of the art and intricacies of translating literary works between English and Arabic. Rooted in the rich traditions of both languages, the course encompasses a comprehensive study of literary translation theory, combined with practical exercises aimed at honing students' skills. Through the analysis of diverse literary genres, including fiction, poetry, and drama, students will delve into the complexities of conveying artistic expression across linguistic boundaries. The syllabus places a strong emphasis on refining translation techniques, with a focus on maintaining the essence, style, and cultural context of the original work.
103LOCLM4	Localization	2 Cr.
This course aims to allow students to master all the activities necessary for the linguistic and cultural adaptation of a website or software to a given region, starting from the analysis of the needs of the target market to its translation. It thus contributes to developing students' ability to invest in information and communication technologies for the creation of multilingual websites.
103TAO1M1	MT/CAT 1	4 Cr.
This course is designed for first-year Master students in translation. Its primary objective is to provide them with an insight into the potential and constraints of machine translation (MT) and computer-assisted translation (CAT). Furthermore, students will develop proficiency in swiftly and effectively utilizing various translation tools, empowering them to optimize the integration of MT/CAT in their translation endeavors.
103TAO2M4	MT/CAT 2	2 Cr.
This course is intended for second-year Master in Translation students. It allows them to deepen their knowledge in the field of MT/CAT technologies, to use a variety of CAT systems in order to wisely choose the most appropriate one according to resources and needs, and to keep up with evolving MT/CAT technologies. Prerequisite: MT/CAT 1 (103TAO1M1)
103TINCM3	Public Service Interpretation and Translation	2 Cr.
This course provides translation students with both a practical and theoretical insight into the role of public service translators and interpreters. It focuses on the wide range of issues and challenges faced by these cultural and linguistic mediators and teaches students how to develop the relevant strategies and skills – including note-taking, sight translation, glossary building, as well as enhancing the understanding of verbal and non-verbal communication cues – in order to bridge the gap between service users and service providers in a range of public service contexts.

103LAR1M3 Research Language 1 2 Cr.

This course provides students with an opportunity to enhance their skills in writing scientific papers, specifically within the field of translation studies. Students will be acquainted with the conventions and requisites of research work, cultivating their capacity to articulate and present ideas with precision, clarity, and in accordance with ethical and academic norms.

Throughout the course, students will gain a comprehensive understanding of various genres of scientific writing relevant to translation studies. They will receive guidance in crafting research papers, encompassing abstracts, literature reviews, and academic articles. Additionally, the course will delve into citation standards, the structural components of academic documents, and the methodologies intrinsic to effective research. This holistic approach aims to empower students with theoretical insights and practical skills essential for successful scholarly communication in the field of translation studies.

103LAR2M4 Research Language 2 2 Cr.

This course focuses on developing students' writing skills in the field of translation studies, in accordance with established academic standards. It involves writing a research paper crafted around a predefined problem and deemed suitable for publication in a specialized translation journal.

103RPEDM2 Revision/Post-Editing 4 Cr.

This course, designed for students enrolled in the Master in Translation program, strives to instill an understanding of the significance of quality assurance in the professional translation context. It introduces students to the practices associated with reviewing human translations and post-editing machine translations.

103SMT1M3 Seminar 1 2 Cr.

This seminar, led by a local or international speaker, focuses on a specific and current topic in the field of translation studies.

103MSE2M3 Seminar 2 2 Cr.

This seminar, led by a local or international speaker, focuses on a specific and current topic in the field of translation studies.

103CCO1M1 Symposia and Conferences 1 4 Cr.

This course is designed to empower students as active participants in their cultural milieu by engaging them in two interventions within the context of cultural events, such as workshops, conferences, round tables, and continuous training sessions. These events may be organized either at USJ or by other academic institutions, national bodies, or international organizations. Following their attendance, students are required to compose a 500-word report for each intervention in a language different from the one employed during the event. This approach not only fosters cultural awareness but also enhances students' ability to articulate their insights in a multilingual context.

103CC2MM2 Symposia and Conferences 2 2 Cr.

This course is designed to empower students as active participants in their cultural milieu. Students will be prompted to engage with four interventions within the context of cultural events, such as workshops, conferences, round tables, and continuous training sessions. These events may be organized either at USJ or by other academic institutions, national bodies, or international organizations. Following their attendance, students are required to compose a 500-word report for each intervention in a language distinct from the one employed during the event. This approach not only fosters cultural awareness but also enhances students' ability to articulate their insights in a multilingual context.

103TREPM2 Terminology: Reflection and Practice 2 Cr.

This course empowers students to employ documentary research strategies in terminology and develop specialized terminology relevant to various fields of expertise. Furthermore, it equips students with the skills to produce scientific writings within the field of terminology.

103TTP1M1 Theatre Translation: From Text to Performance 1 2 Cr.

This course offers an in-depth introduction to the specific challenges of drama translation. Students will explore the linguistic, cultural and performative challenges involved in translating a drama text from one language to another. Particular attention will be paid to contemporary theories of translation as applied to theater.

The course will also offer a historical overview of Arab theater, with a focus on the evolution of Lebanese theater from its origins to the present day. A critical reflection will be carried out on the specificities of theatrical language in the Arab world, in particular the tensions between standard Arabic and local dialects, in a context of diglossia or pluriglossia.

Practical workshops will complement the theoretical approach, inviting students to practice writing for the stage as a preparatory phase for theatrical translation.

103TTP2M2 Theatre Translation: From Text to Performance 2 2 Cr.

This course builds on the theory and practice of Translating Theater: From Text to Performance 1. Students will be immersed in a collective translation project and will have the opportunity to experiment with the various stages of the process, including reading and analyzing the source text, identifying linguistic and cultural issues, developing translation strategies, dividing tasks, submitting the text to a director or theater specialist, and integrating critical feedback.

This practical work aims to demonstrate the collaborative nature of theatrical translation and the relationship between translation and the demands of the stage. Students will learn to bridge the gap between the translated text and its stage adaptation and understand the translator's role as a mediator between playwriting and performance.

103PTRAM2 Translation Pedagogy 2 Cr.

This course is designed to familiarize students with the fundamental principles of pedagogical practice, with a specific focus on the unique context of translation. Throughout the course, students will explore key theoretical and methodological frameworks that shape effective teaching and learning strategies in translation studies. Emphasis is placed on preparing students for real-world applications by equipping them with the skills to design instructional materials that align with both academic and pedagogical goals. Additionally, students will develop the competencies required to effectively lead translation workshops, with particular attention to communication skills, classroom management, and the evaluation of student learning.

103TRARM1 Translation Studies: Reflective Analysis 4 Cr.

This course, designed for Master's level students, serves as an essential foundation for preparing the Master thesis. While it requires no prerequisites, it is instrumental in developing two core competencies: formulating effective research strategies in translation studies and translating scholarly texts within the field. Through an in-depth exploration of key translation theories, students are encouraged to build their own structured and coherent reflective approach, seamlessly linking theoretical knowledge to practical translation experience. This course thus bridges the gap between academic research and hands-on translation practice, equipping students with the analytical skills necessary for advanced scholarly work.

Courses Specific to the Conference Translation Concentration

103GPSPM3	Astrogeopolitics	2 Cr.
This course examines the intersection of space exploration, global politics, and international relations. It explores how outer space has become a strategic frontier for geopolitical competition and cooperation, covering topics such as space diplomacy, militarization, space resources, and international space law. Through critical discussions, students will analyze the impact of space activities on national security, technological advancement, and global governance.
103TCAEM3	Conference Field Arabic-English	2 Cr.
This course is designed to equip students with the skills necessary to translate a wide range of texts and documents intended for conferences and meetings organized by international institutions, specialized non-governmental organizations (NGOs), and intergovernmental agencies. Emphasizing both linguistic accuracy and contextual understanding, the course enables students to handle materials that are critical to the effective functioning of these entities, such as policy briefs, resolutions, strategic reports, and diplomatic communications.
103TCAFM2	Conference Field Arabic-French	2 Cr.
This course aims to introduce students to the structure, formulation, and terminology of conference texts of various kinds. Students will explore current themes addressed in these conferences and develop several skills, including the ability to conduct research in both Arabic and French to familiarize themselves with the conference topic and its specific terminology before starting the translation process. Emphasis will also be placed on elevating the quality of the source text during translation while adhering to French language standards. Additionally, students will learn to judiciously use terminology specific to conferences. Finally, the course highlights the necessity of working quickly and efficiently, underscoring the crucial relationship between speed and quality in conference translation.
103TCEAM3	Conference Field English-Arabic	4 Cr.
The objective of this course is to acquaint students with various conference texts to enhance their proficiency in translating this kind of documents from English into Arabic. Students will be tasked with analyzing diverse text types, segmenting sentences, and identifying the language register and terminology specific to each text category, all within designated time constraints.
103DCCBM1	Conference Field English-French	2 Cr.
This course aims to develop the following skills in students: analyzing the translation process of various types of texts (press releases, speeches, reports, conferences, charters, resolutions, etc.) from the UN and other international organizations, and performing accurate translation providing them with foundational knowledge for their professional lives.
103TCFAM1	Conference Field French-Arabic	2 Cr.
This course aims to familiarize students with potential themes addressed within international organizations. It also provides them with an opportunity to acquire, in the context of translating from French to Arabic, a distinctive style specific to various types of conference documents.
103TCBCM2	Conference Field French-English	2 Cr.
This course aims to introduce students to translating various conference texts from French to English, enabling them to develop skills related to analyzing the translation process of different types of texts such as press releases, speeches, reports, conferences, charters, resolutions, and reports from the UN and other international organizations. The emphasis is on accurately translating these documents, thereby enhancing essential skills in this specific field of translation.

103SIMUM1	Conference Simulation	2 Cr.
This course is designed to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of the organizational dynamics behind conferences. Students will learn to identify key stakeholders involved in conferences and gain insights into the responsibilities of conference translators before, during, and after events hosted by governmental or non-governmental organizations, as well as United Nations agencies.
103DTRCM1	Diction and Translation - Conference Translator	2 Cr.
This course aims to introduce translation students to the fundamentals and principles of oral presentation. It seeks to equip them with the ability to express themselves in various forms and with fluency, helping them to effectively utilize this skill in their professional work. This is especially pertinent for international conferences and other forums where they may be required to deliver speeches or lectures.
103DCDIM4	Diplomatic Correspondence Field	2 Cr.
This course is designed to equip students with the essential skills and knowledge required for effective communication and correspondence in the realm of diplomacy. It delves into the intricacies of diplomatic communication, including various types of correspondence, diplomatic protocols, international relations, and the art of crafting diplomatic messages. Students will gain a deep understanding of diplomatic etiquette and conventions, enabling them to confidently engage in diplomatic exchanges and represent their countries or organizations with professionalism and finesse.

103NRECM2	Research Paper	4 Cr.
A research paper is a document written by a student under the guidance of an academic supervisor. Based on a proposed issue, the student is required to draft an article suitable for publication in a specialized journal in translation studies, while ensuring their reflection is enriched with practical examples and proper referencing. The student must coherently and logically integrate their knowledge in the document to justify the choice, relevance, and academic and/or practical scope of the issue. They are expected to demonstrate analytical and synthetic skills in relation to academic literature.
103PRREM1	Research Presentation	2 Cr.
This course aims to enable students to clearly and unambiguously orally present their conclusions, along with the knowledge and reasoning that support them, to both specialist and non-specialist audiences. It helps them learn to select appropriate tools for preparing and delivering scientific oral presentations, to effectively use these tools, and to become aware of their contributions and limitations.
103REVIM1	Revision	2 Cr.
This course aims primarily to introduce students to revision in the field of translation, particularly literary translation. It emphasizes the concept of quality in translation and the importance of the “four-eye principle” in the translation process to sharpen their ability to spot errors and enhance their translation and writing skills. This course raises students’ awareness of both the practical aspects of revision in a professional context and its theoretical foundations.

103S1TTM1	Seminar – Translation Studies	2 Cr.
This seminar is intended for students pursuing research and is led by a local or foreign speaker. Its objective is to analyze theoretical texts specific to a current theory or approach in translation studies and to develop students' research skills.
103SINMM3	Teaching Internship	8 Cr.
This internship aims to familiarize students with the practice of teaching and to encourage reflection on their personal and professional development through hands-on teaching experience.
103SOMEM4	Thesis Defense	8 Cr.
Once the thesis is completed, students are required to defend it before a jury composed of the thesis supervisor and two other members. The defense provides an opportunity for students to present their arguments, discuss them, or challenge them.
103FORMM3	Thesis Forum	4 Cr.
This course aims to be a forum for exchange between student-researchers and academic staff, where students can present their thesis topics and discuss them to advance their research. It provides students with the opportunity to work collaboratively, enhance their skills, and refine their thesis.
103PMEMM4	Thesis Preparation	4 Cr.
Writing a thesis represents a major milestone in a student's academic journey. Following the presentation of the project outline, an academic supervisor is assigned to guide the student through the thesis development phase. The thesis serves as an academic document aimed at demonstrating the mastery of theoretical and practical knowledge that the student has successfully acquired throughout their education.
103ATMTM3	Thesis Workshop	4 Cr.
This course is designed to elevate students' understanding and application of three fundamental concepts: reflection, problematization, and critique. Throughout the workshop, students deeply engage with the process of reflection, learning to critically analyze their research questions, methodologies, and findings. They develop skills in problematization, gaining proficiency in identifying and articulating the complexities and challenges within their chosen topics. Furthermore, the course cultivates students' ability to provide insightful critiques, both of their own work and that of their peers, fostering a culture of constructive feedback and improvement.
103DTR1M2	Translation Studies Field 1	4 Cr.
This course is designed to help students refine their skills in rewriting texts related to translation studies in a target language. By focusing on specialized texts in translation studies, students learn to identify and extract key terms and concepts from this field, in order to build a comprehensive and precise translation studies lexicon.
103DTR2M3	Translation Studies Field 2	4 Cr.
This course is dedicated to the in-depth exploration of the field of translation studies through the translation of texts within this field. Its aim is to enhance students' analytical and critical skills towards various trends in translation studies, and to master the conceptual tools necessary for reflecting on the translation process.
