1. Preamble

As of September 2021, and in accordance with the provisions of Lebanese Law no. 220, which came into effect on June 8, 2000, Saint Joseph University of Beirut (hereinafter referred to as “the University”) has committed itself to establishing and maintaining an inclusive work environment, free from any form of discrimination, and which upholds the dignity of all members of the University community.

To translate vision into action, the University’s commitment to inclusion has been matched by this Policy.

2. Purpose of this Policy

The purpose of this Policy is to outline the principles, procedures, and roles regarding the inclusion of members of the University community with disabilities, to support them in their academic, community, and professional journeys.

3. Definitions

Disability: according to Lebanese Law no. 220 on the Rights of Disabled Persons (Law 220/2000), a disability is any activity limitation, restriction or incapacity to engage in social life as a result of a substantial, lasting, or permanent impairment of one or more physical, sensory, mental, cognitive or psychological functions, multiple disabilities or a disabling health disorder.

Persons with a disability: any person with an impairment that results in a significant and persistent incapacity, and who is prone to encountering barriers in the performance of everyday activities.

Students with a disability: refers to students with a hearing, motor, organic, or visual impairment, learning difficulty, attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD), speech and language disorder, neurological disorder, mental health disorder, or autism spectrum disorder (ASD), resulting in incapacities.

University Community: any administrative staff member, tenured or non-tenured; any faculty member, tenured or non-tenured; any student or intern; any researcher or PhD candidate; any guest of the University; any contractor hired by the University; any administrator.

Impairment: a loss, a deformity, or an insufficiency of an organ or a structure (birth defect or acquired defect as a result of disease or accident).

Incapacity: a condition that reduces a person’s ability to function and may be physiological, anatomical, intellectual, or psychological.

Significant incapacity: for the incapacity to be significant, it means that it is substantial and presents a certain degree of severity or gravity.

Persistent incapacity: the persistence of the incapacity, arising from an injury or illness, implies continuity as opposed to temporariness.

Barriers: these represent the physical or social characteristics of the environment in which a person finds themselves, and which, when combined with their incapacities, limit their activities. These barriers are encountered in the performance of daily and domestic activities as well as in activities related to leisure, education, or employment.

Discrimination on the basis of disability: a direct or an indirect distinction or exclusion based on the physical or mental condition of the person with a disability.

Accommodations: conditions or means put in place in a learning, an assessment, or an employment setting to address, without discrimination or bias, the functional impairment of a student, an instructor, or a member of the administrative staff, thereby ensuring fair and equitable access to resources and information necessary for their education and employment. The purpose of accommodations is to enable the person with a disability to demonstrate the ability to master the content and skills required to succeed in a course or job, without disadvantages related to the functional impairment, while meeting the objectives of the activity.
